The Pro-Boers of London.

The effort to break up the pro-Boer meeting in London last night was a mistake. The meeting gained its only importance by the ill-considered attack on it. With Mr. Labouchere in the chair-an all-around quiz and cynic, ready at any and all times to aid in embarrassing any and all governments on any and all subjects-and Mr. Keir Hardie, a fantastic socialist, on the stage at his right hand, the people had no good reason to take the meeting seriously. The English cause was certain not to be injured by it. It was naturally a little irritating to have even such Englishmen engaged in such business in the English capital, but pin pricks do not excuse violence, and London might well have gone its way and left those assembled at Queen's Hall to indulge themselves to the full in their feelings. As proper would it have been for the sane and patriotic people of Boston to have raided one of those anti-imperialist meetings held in the interests of the Filipinos at the time when Mr. Atkinson with his mouth and Mr. Garrison with his pen were lambasting the government of the United States on the subject of the Philippines.

The subject of the treatment of the families of the Boers by the authorities in South Africa is one, however, upon which the British government can well afford in a proper way to be sensitive. Accusations on that score should be promptly and fully met. The world is not prepared to believe that the Roer women and children are purposely mistreated or neglected, and it knows that the British government is amply able to care for them. But if the great difficulties of transportation in South Africa, with the Boer raiders dashing in and destroying trains whenever possible, are in the slightest degree telling on the provision made for the helpless non-combatants, the British government should at

In this country we all recall how the noncombatants suffered in Cuba, though nobody would think of imputing Weylerism to any English soldier. When the story first appeared, Spain tried to ignore it. But seeing how it shocked America, Senor de Lome then tried to hide it. Probably the dirtiest money he paid out in his effort to humbug the people of this country about the actual situation in Cuba was that for denials of the particulars of horrors existing in the camps of the reconcentrados, and of the resulting mortality. The success of this invasion of tested in the course of a meeting held at Buffalo a few days ago by representatives from the various independent companies Reports were filed indicating progress everywhere, and it was demonstrated that Statistics filed for the state of Ohio, as a sample, brought the question squarely home to the sufferers from telephone oppression dropped to squeeze out the rivals. Nevertheless, the independent concerns are grow ing in patronage, and the net result of the sheet was a larger increase of subscribers during the past year in the state for the rival companies than for the Bell. In many

This is the case in Youngstown, 44,800 inhabitants, where there are 1,300 subscribers to the independent service at $25 a year, business rate, to 950 Bell 'phones at from $30 to $42 a year. In Urbana, 6,800 people, the independents have 823 subscribers at $24 a year, to 112 for the Bell at the same rate. In East Liverpool, 16,400 people, there are 522 independent 'phones at $24 to 315 Bells at from $21 to $24. In Coshocton, 6,400 people, the independents have 535 subscribers at $24 to 91 Bell patrons who are given free ser-4.642 independent 'phones at $40 to 3,200 Bell 'phones at $72. Cleveland, 381,000 people, has 7,000 independent 'phones at $48 to examples of the showing throughout the state. In large cities and small the rule pany has secured a foothold it has hard pressed the Bell company against the handicap of radical reductions by the old company, and even in one case, in the face of the free gift of service. A significant deduction from the statistics is that where independent companies have started business the proportion of total number of telephones to the population has increased. In all of the instances herein named the percentage of 'phone use is materially higher than in this city. It is also important to notice that in at least one case the independent company is giving service at a lower rate to a larger number of subscribers than the Bell company serves here, despite the assertion of the local telephone company that the larger the number of subscribers the greater the expense and hence the larger the charge should be.

Education in Cuba.

Reports of all kinds from Cuba are assuring. The island is distinctly on the up grade. Business is increasing. The acreage of planting is increasing. The cities are clean. Health is good. The people are living as quietly as though the war had closed thirty instead of only three years ago. The scars of the conflict are rapidly disappearing. Spaniard and Cuban are living side by side, and are not thrusting at each other's Maybe the latest report is best of all. Certainly it will appeal strongly to everybody interested in the Cuban people. This relates to the schools, and comes from official sources. There are now in the island four million dollars a year. It is expected it is mentioned that in December, 1899, there were only 312 schools in all Cuba. The people are seizing the opportunity to educate their children, and the school system, fashioned after an American model. is being most carefully and thoroughly ad-years, is going to tell very greatly to Cuba's advantage. Education was not a Spanish specialty. The people, in that as in every other particular, were kept in a backward state while Spain ruled. They were denied their just dues, and as a result were at the mercy of the governing classes. But even the poorest now find the school-house door open to their offpenmen on that subject read like the lies spring; and the way they are responding shows how keen their appreciation is of the value of what is spread before them. independent Cuba, as distinguished from brave a resistance that they and theirs the old tax-ridden Spanish colony with her

Hazen S. Pingree possessed some element of the true reformer, but he lacked those which lead to permanent results. He saw chances to change conditions for the better, and he often perceived the remedies for the purpose. But apparently he could not distinguish between the claims of private and of public benefit. He seemed to reform. It will remain for the biographer plating always his own political ends. It may be assumed that history will seek thus to analyze the strange mixture which constituted this man, for he was in many ways unusual in our economy and some of his achievements were striking. He possessed unquestioned courage and enterplaces the rival concern has a larger pat-end of assurance. He proved to be too impatient for party restrictions and not broad enough to constitute himself a new party nucleus. Some degree of fanaticism developed in the latter part of his political career and weakened his prestige with the public. His desires affecting the restriction of the corporations in his state were wholesome, but his methods of attaining entire community of Pingrees might be exciting and perhaps Utopian, but would hardly furnish a desirable place of residence for the conservative, quiet citizen. Among Pingree's miscellaneous projects his potato patch plan attracted considerable of a true reform. Through its suggestion Pingree emphasized the fact that there is a waste in the economical adjustments of every community, which, if properly conserved and applied, might materially reduce the sum of human suffering and deg-

The Army Canteen.

From the Philadelphia Medical Journal. No one need be surprised that the effects of the law abolishing the canteen from the United States army are proving disastrous. men and not like school boys, need hesitate to raise his voice in protest. The attempt to make men total abstainers by act of Congress will fail, as it deserves to fail. The willingness to indulge the impractical ethics of a private organization of agitators at the expense of the comforts and personal rights of the soldiers in the United States army will evidently soon be rebuked by an enlightened public opinion. During the short time that the law has been in force it has led to increase in drunkenness and, worse yet, to increase in venereal diseases. Dr. L. L. Seaman, in a paper read before the Association of Military and Naval Surgeons, openly declares this to be a fact. The men who are obliged to leave the post for the saloon find it a short step eventually from the saloon to the brothel. The American Medical Association at St. Paul has put itself on record in a resolution in which it deplores the action of Congress in abolishing the army post exchange, or can-teen, and in the interest of discipline, morality and sanitation, recommends its re-establishment at the earliest possible

The effect of the act, as we understand it, is to deprive the soldier of his, social club and a part of his social life within the precincts of his post or garrison. If such a law is to stand we should all look out lest every club in civil life be closed ere long by some more of this grandmotherly
